In the House, on the 27th, Mr. Butler, of Massachusetts, as a question of privilege, called up the matter of the election of 1874, in Louisiana, and considered the effect of its civil rights bill was referred to the judiciary committee. A point of order was raised, but the speaker decided on the authority of the precedents that the question of the constitutionality of the bill was not to be considered. Thereupon, the democrats began filibustering. After some three hours had elapsed, Mr. Butler said he had a proposition to make, as follows: "We have a question of consideration of this civil rights bill. I desire to say to the opposite side of the House that I am ready to withdraw it if they considered, we on this side of the house will permit all proper opportunity for debate, and will be content to let the bill pass if it is offered, so that every man can give his amendment and make such a change as he will to be considered fairly and properly." The speaker then asked if there was any objection to the proposition. There was no objection, and with every indication of a continuation of the session till noon to-morrow. The vote was taken on the proposition, and the yeas were 117 and the nays 100. The eighth roll call was commenced at eleven o'clock. There is no prospect of any legislation being passed before the adjournment.

as soon as possible after they are spread, whenever the ground is not too wet to be plowed.

Top-dressing crops with manure, for instance, is beneficial to them, although the manure is exposed to the sun and wind and cannot be used as a mulch. It is not a conservative and profitable method, but it is the best that can be done. It is the best that can be done, but it would be much more beneficial if the manure could be spread in the furrows and the waste by exposure preserved. Besides, it is not top-dressing always needed at a season when rain may be expected to wash the manurely plant off the soil.

If top-dressing could be applied in a liquid form, will anybody think that it would be of more benefit than if it were spread on the surface?

RESERVATION OF WORN SOIL.

We all have lands not worn out, tired down by continual cropping,

Turn under the peas in September and sow to rye, and pasture through the winter with sheep; the second spring turn under rye at proper time and again sow to peas; these in turn to be plowed in September; then in October, by plowing in clover, and harrowing in about thirty bushels of cotton seed per acre, and harrowing in well with clover sown slightly harrowed in the spring, you are ready for a judicious system of rotation of crops—say cotton, corn, wheat and clover. If lime can be procured at a reasonable price it should be used when the clover is turned under under American Farmer.

will be obtained, provided the ground is not too wet for pasturage at the time. The most preferable method, however, to thoroughly prepare the soil, and as above described; the exception being, that the soil may be plowed when better preparation cannot be obtained.—Southern Farmer.

SALT AND CHICKENS.

In some paper a correspondent says that it is fatal to fowls, and some more than a lady, I think, recommended that they should be rubbed with salt on their heads from some unknown cause, but cause, though, I think to be secondary effects of rump. The fowls seem feverish, and soon all the feathers come off. Mine were so, and I would kill or cure; so I mixed up a half pint of soft sand and rubbed it on their heads. I did not intend to see what the result was, but found them all alive but very thin. I gave them some water, and the next day more salt. My hens recovered out on their heads, and the cock topped each other's feathers. I rubbed the head of one with salt, and it cured many lumps. It will cure headache, make cream free, &c. but better come, take ink stains out of cloths of any kind, kill weeds &c. worms, make the ground cool so it will be congenial to cabbage, celery, &c. and the washing pan can be used for killing disease in hives, &c. &c. reduce vomiting or stop it, just as
